

Olivier Brochet to lead Aerospace & Defence sector research at Redburn

Redburn (Europe) Ltd, the leading equity research and execution firm, is delighted to announce Olivier Brochet has joined the firm to lead the Aerospace & Defence sector.

Olivier started his career in the aerospace industry and has over 20 years of experience on the sell-side including at Natixis, Exane and Credit Suisse, as well as working as a strategy and financial consultant to the industry for almost four years. A graduate of the ICN Business School with a master's degree in Geostrategy from Paris II University, Olivier is an alumnus of the French War College (IHEDN-AED) and recently obtained the EFFAS ESG analyst certification.

Steve East and Nick Delfas, co-heads of sector research, commented: "We warmly welcome Olivier to Redburn. Olivier's in-depth industrial and financial markets experience in Aerospace & Defence will be of enormous benefit to our clients."

-ENDS-

Notes to editors:Media contacts:

Teamspirit - redburn@teamspirit.co.uk

About Redburn

Redburn is built upon a commitment to intellectual freedom, commercial research, best execution and premium client service. Redburn was founded in 2003, and has grown from 14 employees to 200. Redburn provides institutional investors with equity research, quantitative and technical analysis, economics research and agency execution in European and North American equity markets. In addition to research and execution, Redburn Access links investors to Redburn's network of industry executives and independent experts. Redburn has offices in London, Paris, Madrid, New York and Boston. www.redburn.com